While the English Department has continued to address the arduous and lack-luster task of improving oral and written expression, we have also enjoyed some singular highlights. We carried out the total responsibility for providing training for the twenty student curators of the Barnett-Aden Art Collection which was housed at Weaver High School. This was a never-to-be-forgotten language-art experience. In addition, we have continued our participation in the Toastmaster's Club which provides opportunities for our budding forensic geniuses. We are also looking forward to another fine production by the drama classes. Then, back to the business of the year — we established the Writing Proficiency Test as an official part of the English curriculum.

Still in its infancy, (2nd year) this program has received unprecedented support from the business students and has already been recognized in state circles as an up-and-coming chapter. Highlights of this year include a work-experience program with a local banking institution, a Christmas canned goods drive for the needy, acceptance of an invitation to participate in the Governor's Challenge for Youth Program and March of Dimes fund-raising campaign.

The Foreign Language Department feels that the majority of students should be exposed to the study of another language. It is a mind-broadening experience and a valuable asset to have in today's world.

We are very happy to have many Weaver students studying French and Spanish this year. All the Spanish-speaking students at Weaver are also continuing to develop skills in their native language as well as in English. We also have a group of students learning conversational Japanese, in preparation for their trip to Japan in the summer of 1978.

The department is to have two additions to the teaching staff Mr. Charles Tewksbury and Mrs. Teriko Greene.

We hope to see even more of you in our classes in the future. Bilingualism is beautiful!!!

The Department of the Arts was formed this year by combining the Art and Music Departments.

The Music Department fielded an improved Marching Band and had to turn students away from piano and choir classes because there wasn't enough room. The Christmas and Spring Concerts gave the talented Weaver Students a chance to demonstrate their accomplishments.

The Art Department was pleased to see the student Murals in the halls. The Art Major Students worked in a co-operative program with the University of Hartford Graphics Studio. The Barnett Aden Collection made art appreciation come alive for the art students and afforded them the opportunity to meet many local and nationally prominent personalities associated with the visual arts. The "Star War" Christmas Tree permitted the students' talent to be viewed by a wide television and newspaper audience.

Through the efforts of Amistad House the Barnett-Aden Collection of Afro-American Art was exhibited at Weaver during December. It was the first time that this outstanding exhibit has been housed outside a museum setting. The exhibit is the oldest collection of works by Black Artists and has examples from the 19th century through the present.

Students from the three high schools served as curators after receiving training by the English Staff at Weaver. The opening had the misfortune of happening during a mini-blizzard, however it was meaningful for those who braved the storm to attend. During the exhibit students from all the middle and high schools as well as many elementary schools were inspired by the works of art. It is hoped that similar exhibits will continue in the future.
